

BLAST IS MYSTERY; 17 ARE INJURED

PENSACOLA FLA. SUFFERS HEAVY DAMAGE

SILENCE OF TWENTY FOUR HOURS BROKEN WITH FIRST REPORT

None Dead In City—
South American Storm
Kills 300

Pensacola, Fla., the last of the major cities of the south to be heard from since it was visited by the full fury of the hurricane sweeping Florida and eastern gulf coast, reported by radio today that it had suffered heavy property damage, but no lives had been lost within the city. Three were reported dead in the Pensacola district.

This word, which came out first in a message from the commandant of the Navy Radio Station, relieved twenty-four hours of anxiety, during which no word had come from the city since a dispatch late Monday night which showed the hurricane was about to descend. Mobile, which was in partial communication yesterday, today was able to give a full account of its damage. It suffered only slightly, compared to the heavy losses Florida cities sustained.

A hurricane in South America, independent of the one which has swept the eastern gulf section, was reported today in dispatches from Asuncion, Uruguay. It took a toll of 300 lives, the dispatches said.

In Florida martial law has been lifted and normal conditions, except for the wrecked buildings and the demoralization they continue to hold, are being restored.

The list of known dead stood at 407 today in Southeastern Florida while three dead near Pensacola made the total for the storm in Florida 410.

Miami last night had electric lights for the first time since Saturday. Rail and wire communication gradually was restored.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—Serious damage to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, in the West Indian Hurricane was reported to naval communications here over night. The message said great damage had been done planes, hangars, houses, shops and storehouses, but up to the time of filing the message last night there had been no reports of serious injuries to personnel.

The station's water supply was cut, however, and there was no light, water or power.

Red Cross messages said only that Pensacola had been hard hit. The report at the Weather bureau last night was that the storm was diminishing.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 22—Property damage estimated at a million dollars was done in Mobile by the hurricane which struck here Monday night, but no loss of life occurred.

Broken windows constituted the chief damage to the more substantial buildings. Telephone and power wires are demoralized and electricity was available only in the downtown section last night. Train service is at a standstill.

The tug Echo reached here after visiting the town of Fairhope, between Mobile and Pensacola, and reported $100,000 damage there but no lives lost.

ATTORNEYS ARGUE ROAD INJUNCTION

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 22—Attorneys today started their arguments in the suit to enjoin the state highway department from letting a contract for construction of the Mayfield Road to the Dorsey Construction Company, of Findlay.

Testifying as the last witness, late yesterday, W. E. Dorsey denied he ever contributed to the campaign fund of Governor Vic Donahey.

John A. Cline, a taxpayer who brought the suit charged that campaign contributions were responsible for awarding the contract to Dorsey.

SHOWERS MAY MAR BIG RING BATTLE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—Showers may mar the Dempsey-Tunney championship fight in Philadelphia tomorrow night.

COMMITTEE ACTS ON RESERVATIONS

URGED ACCEPTANCE WITH APPROVAL OF FORMULA AT GENEVA

Must Negotiate With League On Advisory
Question

GENEVA, Sept. 22—Acceptance of all the American reservations to the world court protocol was recommended by the drafting committee of fourteen today with the sole provision that the United States should negotiate an understanding with the League of Nations council with respect to the manner of expressing American consent to the court rendering an advisory opinion.

The committee of fourteen was appointed by the conference of Hague court signatories here to find a formula for accepting the United States reservations. The committee today adopted a draft of the formula outlined in the foregoing. Should the United States object to the court giving an advisory opinion on any question to which the United States was not a party, this objection would have the same force and effect as if the United States were a member of the league and voted against such an advisory opinion.

All signatories of the world court protocol will be requested to use their formula, devised by the committee today, as a basis for their individual replies to the United States with respect to the treaty reservations.

The formula still would have to be accepted by the full conference of world court signatories and then by the United States. The drafters of the formula sought a means of safeguarding the rights of the present signatories while at the same time making the formula in such form that President Coolidge and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg could accept it without further reference to the senate.

EXPLOSION WRECKS YOUNGSTOWN STORE AND LEVELS HOUSES

One Victim Believed Dying—Fire Adds To Danger
—Estimate Damage at $300,000
From Blast

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 22.—A mysterious explosion today completely wrecked the Youngstown Grocery Co., leveled three houses adjoining it and may have killed several persons.

The blast was felt over the entire city, threw people in the immediate neighborhood into panic and brought great crowds to the scene.

Residents in a radius of five blocks were blown out of bed. Fire which broke out immediately following the explosion made it impossible to gain entrance to wrecked homes to learn the casualties.

Several persons are known to be injured severely. Many of these were cut by glass, flying from their windows.

ONE VICTIM DYING
One man is believed dying in Youngstown hospital. He is Frank Rodgers.

First arrivals at the scene of the blast found him in the street. Fritz Braun, address unknown, also is in Youngstown hospital, seriously cut. He will recover.

Another unidentified man, also badly cut was taken to Youngstown hospital.

The explosion, which occurred at 4:10 this morning, caused damage tentatively estimated at $300,000.

Persons near the scene of the blast reported seeing a mass of timbers and bricks thrown several hundred feet into the air when the charge let go. Persons walking on the street in the vicinity, were subjected to a rain of wreckage.

POLICE SEEK CAUSE

Police seeking the cause of the explosion began investigation of a letter received by G. Silvestri, president of the Youngstown Grocery Co., which warned him against price cutting and told him if he continued the practice he would be "put out of business." The letter was postmarked Sharon, Pa.

Silvestri, however, said he did not believe there was any connection between the letter and the explosion. However, he could not advance a theory for the dynamiting.

The last person to leave the building yesterday was Silvestri. The blast severed high tension wires in the street and these lay on the ground, occasionally sputtering and hissing.

A cordon of police was placed about the district to keep sightseers from interfering with the

FIGHT PRINCIPALS REST PREPARATORY TO THURSDAY BOUT

Only Few Seats Left For Dempsey And Tun-
ney Go.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—After weeks of training for the richest prize in the catalogue of sports, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, who are to meet here tomorrow night for the world's heavyweight championship, rested today in their training camps at Atlantic City and Stroudsburg. Dempsey had surrounded him, a staff of New York and Chicago detectives to protect him from summons and process servers and his lawyers were here to answer a couple of suits and injunctions today.

Gene Normille, Dempsey's business manager and Johnny Broderick, sergeant detective of the gangster squad in New York, were on the scene early.

Normille said that he came here for the purpose of arranging a place for Dempsey to stay after noon tomorrow when he has to appear here to weigh in for the fight.

Bob Farrell and Harvey Boyle, two members of the Pennsylvania boxing commission said that the police department had been asked to keep the crowds away from the office of the exposition, while the weighing is being done.

Tex Rickard's ticket office has a few seats in the seventh row for $27.50 and the prominent hotels had nothing for anything.

The city was filled with delegations to fraternal conventions and with tourists to the Centennial Exposition and very little professional talk about the fight was heard. Some New York money was reported to be in the hands of agents to offer at the best odds available that Tunney would win the fight. But there was no talkers here and it was said that all the smart money was being taken and laid by the race track men in New York.

Investigation and to prevent persons from coming in contact with the live wires.

Windows in business houses, weakened by the force of the concussion, continued to crash as late as 7 o'clock. A large show window in the Ritter and Eyer clothing store, a half mile from where the explosion occurred, broke three hours after the blast.

WOMAN HELD AFTER CUTTING HUSBAND WITH POCKET KNIFE

Mrs. Eunice Cross, 38, colored, inflicted painful but not serious stab wounds upon her husband, Robert Cross, 49, colored, at their home, 533 E. Main St., as a result of an altercation between the man and wife at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Unaware that the blade of the pocket knife she had wielded had penetrated deep into his back, grazing a rib and narrowly missing his heart, Mrs. Cross is reported to have summoned police to effect the arrest of her husband, who had previously threatened her with a razor, she said.

Mrs. Cross pleaded not guilty to an affidavit signed by her husband charging cutting with intent to wound before Mayor John W. Prugh Tuesday morning and was held to the grand jury under $300 bail. She was to be released as soon as bond was available.

She was arrested by Patrolman Fred Jones, who answered her call for assistance.

Cross' injuries were treated by Dr. H. H. Hawkins. Had the knife blade not glanced off a rib the stab wound probably have proven fatal, police say.

Police are uninformed as to the nature of the quarrel but say an argument preceded the cutting affray. Cross was seated and bending down to tie his shoe lace while dressing when his wife suddenly whipped out a knife and imbedded the blade in his back, according to police information. Despite

PLAN OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL DRIVE HERE THURSDAY FOR $1,000

Plans are going forward for the one day drive to be made Thursday by the Federated Parent-Teachers' Association of the city for the purpose of deriving work for the Opportunity School.

In speaking of the drive which is for the purpose of obtaining $1000 or more for the special work an official of the association said:

"The project which has been operated by the Federated P. T. A. of Xenia for the past few years has always met with a deserved success in its reception by the Xenia public. The funds which have been raised in the successful one-day drives have been put to excellent use in a field that needed attention badly, and which would be without attention if the Association should exclude this project from its activities. Modern social service has emphasized the necessity of expending public funds in a way in which the results may be greatest and reach the farthest. The Federation of the P. T. A. organizations in Xenia has chosen wisely in directing its efforts toward the provision of physical necessities that would promote the health and comfort, and consequently the educational advancement of Xenia children.

"While a great portion of the funds raised by the Association has been spent in providing lunches for the children in the Opportunity schools, the children in the other schools of the city are also provided for in an ample way. McKinley, Spring Hill and Orient Hill schools may and do send children to the High School cafeteria for the lunches provided by the P. T. A. The project is not confined to one school or group of children but includes all Xenia children who may profit from the providing of warm lunches.

"The value of the work for which funds are asked is the more apparent when we consider that other social agencies cannot make provision for taking care of the school children in this way. Educational officials, physicians and others who are interested and have investigated the effect of proper nourishment upon a child's educational progress appreciate the tremendous importance of careful attention to this phase of the work of the school.

"As an integral part of the school system, the P. T. A. Federation deserves the support of the public in the same splendid fashion of past years, and every teacher and principal and school official heartily recommend this project to the people of Xenia.

"Those who can see every day the beneficial results of this activity are more than willing to recommend enthusiastically the efforts of the Federation to secure the necessary amounts to carry on the work.

"That the public may know of the extent and type of the assistance it gives through its donations to the P. T. A. a brief summary of the work of last year may be of interest. From October to May of the school year 1925-26, 7850 warm lunches were provided in cases where otherwise the children would have had but a cold lunch and more often no lunch at all. The number of children cared for each day ranged from a score in the autumn and spring to seventy-five in the bad days of mid-winter. The donors to this cause in past years can estimate through these figures how much was accomplished through their generosity.

A Happy Woman

A MAN dreams of wealth, success and power. A woman dreams of a home of her own and babies to love. Happy is the young woman whose dream is fulfilled. With good health, housework is not a burden. Her home echoes to the prattle of healthy children. She must not fail those tiny hands. Her husband is still her comrade and confidant, sharing her new responsibilities. She is content.

Happy, too, is the older woman who holds her children's children in her arms and lives to see a new generation dreaming dreams of its own.

A young girl in Iowa was in such a weakened condition that she had to leave school. One day, after being in poor health for about two years, she picked up an advertising booklet and read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began to take your medicine," she writes. "Now I am a housekeeper with six children and I have taken it before each was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."

XENIA VOTERS WILL GET THREE BALLOTS AT ELECTION POLLS

Xenia voters will be handed three ballots when they invade the polling places at the regular election November 2, it is disclosed by Earl Short, clerk of the board of elections.

One ballot will contain the state and county ticket which will include slates entered by the Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Commonwealth Land parties; a second the local and state judicial ticket and the third the proposal to establish a County Library District.

Voters in other parts of the county will receive from three to five ballots depending upon local issues.

Yellow Springs Village electorate will be required to vote upon the proposal of a $60,000 bond issue to provide a municipal waterworks plant. A bond issue of $30,000 for a similar purpose will be submitted to Fairfield voters for approval or disapproval.

Four rural school districts are asking tax levies for school purposes. Jamestown Village Rural School District is asking a three mill levy for three years, Bath Twp. Consolidated School District a three mill levy for two years, Ross Twp. Rural School District a two mill levy for five years and Cedarville Twp. Rural School District a two mill levy for five years.

Mr. Short estimates that it will be necessary to print 16,000 ballots for the state ticket, 16,000 for the judicial ticket, 14,000 for the library proposition, and 4,500 for the various proposed tax levies.

Bids for the ballots are being advertised with the election slightly more than a month away and the printing contracts will probably be awarded by the board of elections at their next meeting within two weeks, it is announced.

EXTENSION COURSE EXPLAINED AT MEET

Thirty Greene County teachers attended the initial meeting regarding the teachers' extension course at the Court House, Monday evening.

Prof. H. H. Smith, of Cedarville College, who will be in charge of the course, announced that only about twenty-five teachers can be accommodated for the first course, but it is probable that other extension courses will be established in Jamestown and Wayneville, of which Greene County teachers may take advantage.

The course will give college and normal school credit, and admission to teachers' examination. It may also be used for renewal of teaching certificates, it is announced.

The next meeting will be held at the office of Superintendent H. C. Aultman, Monday evening at 6:30.

STATE OFFICERS OF EAGLES WILL SPEAK

FRECKLES COUNT IN THIS CONTEST

TULARE, Cal., Sept. 22.—Freckle-faced youngsters from all parts of the state were here today to compete in a contest which places a premium on their freckles.

"Spec" O'Donnell, juvenile film star and king of the fair, will decide the winner.

Announcement of the contest was made before the vacation period started and many boys have spent the summer cultivating their freckles instead of applying lotions to remove them.

Showers are predicted for Wednesday night while it is alleged Thursday will be cloudy and much cooler.

YOUR TOWN AND YOU

Your town boosts you. Why not do as well by the town as it does by you? No citizen is so powerful, none so humble, but what the town is an aid to him in some way or other.

The food that he eats, the clothes he wears, the recreation and amusement that he enjoys, all originate in the town, because the money with which they are procured is made there.

When a fellow boosts his own town he does not stop there. He is performing an act that improves his own condition, for every good word and every good deed has its elevating influence.

A few people are always home-town boosters. They accomplish much in the way of community betterment, and this improves the condition of not only themselves, but also of those who do no boosting at all.

If every citizen would constitute himself a home-town booster the result collectively would be many times as great and opportunities for self improvement would be more numerous.

Think it over in your odd moments. Then get into the boost wagon and hit the pace.

MOST VALUABLE QUALITY

Someone has said that the most valuable human quality, so far as happiness, contentment and joy are concerned, is that quality which enables one to get along with others. This quality enables him to receive pleasant treatment from them and to enjoy their company.

This implies a genius for friendship, and this quality is much more rare than it should be in this old world of ours. It is a quality which should be cultivated. Agreeableness pays big dividends. It is agreeableness that helps one to do team work, and it is team work that multiplies our ability to accomplish things. So the possession of the quality of making friends not only makes for your happiness and contentment, it also helps you to make more of a success of life as a whole.

One must be above taking offense at trifles. He must be able to meet all persons on the plane of friendship. Ability to do this makes him pleasant to live as a member of the family and makes him a good neighbor. Such a man is always well thought of, has plenty of friends, and seldom has occasion to complain of being lonesome. It is rightly called the most valuable quality of human nature.

A NEW COMPETITION

It is doubtful if there ever was a time when the railroad of the country faced a competition so strenuous and so persistent as that represented in the growing bus traffic of the present day.

The railroads once cried loudly for help when the interurbans crowded them, and took away much of their business.

But today the bus lines of the nation are slowly running the interurbans and the street car systems out of business, and fast digging into the revenues and the patronage of the railroad companies.

Fifteen years ago the bus was practically unknown. Here and there was a jitney, but the business that it picked up was mostly that which came from the street car systems.

Today the bus is a decided factor in the transportation system of the nation, having grown from nothing to a carrying system, that boasts of 60,000 busses, with 7,500 companies controlling the line.

And how has all of this effected the railroad companies? The figures for 1924 show that the railroad companies took in 200,000,000 fewer fares than in 1920.

But the railroads, it seems, realizing the competition that faces, and knowing the futility of fighting it without weapons, have adopted for themselves the very ones which have taken away their own passengers and their own freight business. The railroad companies are adapting the busses and the trucks to their own use, literally fighting fire with fire as it were.

So while the millions are rolling from railroads to busses and trucks, they are not leaving entirely the railroad systems. For every day sees a greater and greater number of motorized lines opened up or taken over by the railroad companies, to operate as subsidiaries or feeder lines for the steel ones, and thus to garner in for the railroads the coin and the business which would otherwise have gone into other hands.

It is a stiff competition that is being faced. But the railroads seem to have solved the problem as how best to meet it and profit by it.

A primary system of nomination lets the people rule if they will, but often they won't.

Some vacationists are coming back to work, and some are merely coming back.

FLORIDA RESIDENT HERE IS WORRIED

Frank McKay, former Greene Countyman, now a real estate dealer in Miami, Fla., who has been visiting relatives in this vicinity for the last two weeks, is anxious over conditions in his home city. Mr. and Mrs. McKay have been visiting Mr. McKay's brother-in-law, and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lackey and his brother, Clarence McKay, of New Burlington. They intend to extend their visit a little until conditions following the hurricane which devastated southern Florida have grown more normal.

Mr. McKay has been in the real estate business in Miami about two years and his firm has been interested in the development of a subdivision there in which a number of lots have been sold. Mr. McKay says that he and his business partner had been considering just before he left, the removal of their office into one of the large downtown buildings which reports say was seriously damaged by the hurricane. They declined not to make the change.

—OF— New York

By Jack O'Donnell

I have a friend in this town who makes a living answering questions about the decoration of houses. If Mrs. Newly Rich wants to know if a tapestry would be better than an old brocade back of her piano, my friend will tell her. Or if Mrs. N. R.'s French education has been neglected and she doesn't know what her neighbor means when she says something about Toile de Jouy, she can get the answer from this decorator of houses. Among those who are not of the Newly Rich but who have heard and been interested in my friend's talks on interior decorating are Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, of Chicago. Mrs. Elton Hooker of New York and Dr. MacCracken of Vassar College. Some day I'm going to show my ignorance and ask her the difference between a vase and a vase, if you know what I mean.

Bizarre ladies of New York are discarding the choker and substituting the necklet, fashion's latest gewgaw. The necklet is a plain gold band, about a quarter to half an inch wide, that encircles fair throats even more closely than the choker. It snaps on very much like the old fashioned plain bracelets that our mothers used to wear. But the necklet is not intended for Madams of Many Chins. It shows to advantage, however, on one with a neck like Elsie Ferguson possesses but would be lost to view on Sophie Tucker's.

Jules Guerin and Ernest Pelzotto painters, John Drew and Otis Skinner, actors; Dr. Thompson Sweeney and Glenmore Davis, former employee of Barnum, will join in a decaupation party if they ever learn how Ernest Hunter put one over on them at The Players recently.

These distinguished gentlemen were lunching at the famous round table in the Gramercy Park club when Hunter introduced a stranger, his guest. After naming the party in rapid succession Hunter and his friend sat down.

"It's unfair to a guest to introduce him to six men in one breath," said Dr. Sweeney, who delights in taking Hunter to task. "Two to one he didn't hear one of our names and if he did probably has forgotten them already."

"Bet you a luncheon a-piece that my friend not only heard every name but can repeat them without a slip," Hunter retorted.

Every man in the group knowing the vagaries of memory wanted to take the bet. Hunter accommodated them.

Starting at his right the stranger called, "Mr. Guerin, Mr. Pelzotto, Mr. Drew, Mr. Skinner, Dr. Sweeney, Mr. Davis."

Everybody—that is everybody but Hunter—was amazed.

Later Hunter confided to me that his friend is a memory expert—a chap who writes books on the subject.

GUEST SANDWICHES

We all wish at times, that we could invent some wonderful new dishes to serve our guests after a little afternoon "four" of bridge, or after that simple musical evening, or after our "crowd" returns home with us from a "movie." Yet, the time-honored cup of hot coffee, the sandwich, and the inevitable cake, cannot be improved upon, can they, when it comes to serving our friends what they really like? So let us be original with our sandwiches. And let us choose a light one where a light one is needed, and a nourishing one when our guests are really hungry.

For After the Movies: Tomato Catsup-Egg Sandwiches: Mash six hard-boiled eggs and stir in a tablespoon of tomato catsup. Season with one-eighth teaspoon of salt and a mere dash of pepper and add a very little Mayonnaise dressing—just enough to make a paste which "spreads right." This recipe makes one dozen sandwiches, using crustless slices of

Safety Zones

—FOR— Dollars

HOW WISE INVESTORS INVEST

Three men in Detroit, employed to invest one of the world's largest automobile fortunes, have been on the job about a year now and have invested more than $100,000,000. Each draws a large salary, running into five figures for this work, and all they have to do is to find safe jobs for dollars. That's all investing is, finding safe jobs for dollars. The three men were employed for two reasons. First, when one of the largest automobile businesses was sold, the money received for it had to be put to work or the fortune, huge as it was would gradually disappear.

Second, the three men represent investment houses of proved honesty and skill in selecting investments.

Investing, or finding safe jobs for dollars, is very similar to finding a good job, business or profession for oneself or for a son or daughter. That frequently is a difficult problem. Likewise, finding a good job at which dollars may work is not always easy. It requires thought and deliberation, not haste and dreams of getting something for nothing. Bootleggers and gamblers, it is said, make fortunes, but no right-thinking parent would approve such a vocation. Nor would he consent to his son or daughter going to work with quacks, frauds, incompetents or strangers concerning whose integrity he knows nothing. There's no chance to gain anything worth while by working with frauds or incompetents. There's still less chance for the dollar entrusted to fakers or incompetents.

The purpose of this series of articles, which will appear exclusively in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican, is to show in a practical way how successful investors find safe jobs for their dollars. At bottom the problem of those three Detroit investment specialists, investing more than $100,000,000, is exactly the same as that of the small investor. They must demand just two basic qualities of any investment. Those two qualities are honesty and ability to pay. Promises and hopes of striking oil or gold, or making millions from some new invention or business are worth little or nothing, unless they are backed by honesty and a proved record of successful business achievement. Until he can ascertain these two simple qualities, honesty and ability to pay, the investor should keep his money in the bank, unless he is seeking a gamble or certain loss.

ON Greene County History

EARLIEST TAX LEVY

What did our forefathers spend the money of Greene County for during their incumbency of office? Following the deposition of the levy for Greene County for 1801, as shown by a report dated August 26, 1803:

To the commissioners for selecting a place for the seat of justice, $25; to James Shoden for ballot boxes, $2; to the list of taxable property in Beaver-creek Twp., $18.75; to the same for Sugar-creek Twp., $20; to the same for Mad River Twp., $12.70; to the grand jury of August term $19.55; to James Barrett and Benjamin Whiteman, $12; to William Maxwell, $4.50;

To John Paul for attending as clerk two days and making a list for the sheriff, $12; to the sheriff of ex-officio services, $20; to the clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, $20; to the grand jury for term of Supreme Court, $10.91; to grand jury for December term, $8.07 1-2; to the attorney prosecuting for the state at August term of Common Pleas, $30;

To the same for October term of Supreme Court, $20; to the same for December term of Common Pleas, $20; to sheriff for summoning grand jury for August term, $1.50; to the same for October term of Supreme Court, $2; to the same for December term Common Pleas, $2.50; to Jacob Shingledecker for repairs done to jail, $9.50; to Joseph Vance for carrying election returns of Sugar-creek Twp. to Cincinnati, $6; to David Huston, for ditto, Beaver-creek Twp., $6; probable amount of acts not exhibited, $22; collectors' and treasurer's per cent and depositum, $173.55 1-2.

This is a total of $466.04.

The Theatre

When William Anthony McGuire, dramatic blacksmith, brought his "If I Was Rich," play to New York every critic took a crack at Bill's grammar.

Outraged guardians of the King's English are flooding the managerial offices of the Chautin Theaters Corporation with rebukes because of McGuire's sacrilege. "I'll leave the entire matter up to the box office," says Bill. "To the pure all things are pure."

Which seems to indicate that Big may have heard of the experience of Ray Gilhooley and Neil Whalen, racing drivers, who put the word, "Entertainment," over the door of the garage they operated in New York before it became a night club.

A dozen persons a day used to step in the garage office to remind Messrs. Gilhooley and Whalen that their orthography was atrocious and should be suppressed. One word led to another with Whalen got in so many words they would wind up by selling the grammar expert a second-hand auto.

Odd McIntyre reports the Broadway way who suggested that "Abie's Irish Rose," now famed and kidded because of its long run on Broadway, should suspend for a week while members of the cast have their faces lifted. The cast is practically the same as that which started Anne Nichols' much-maligned play on its road to success so long ago that those who remember the date refuse to admit it. Miss Nichols, who peddled the piece up and down Broadway without a nibble, eventually producing it herself with the aid of an angel, has made millions from the thing and is still raking in the shekels.

And while in a facetious mood it may be appropriate to wind up the column with the story George Rector, actor of the famous Rector restaurant family, told on Nat Willis, the comedian. Willis, says Rector, married a famous circus equestrienne, one of a noted family. Although a large woman she was surprisingly graceful on her horse's back, daintily leaping through hoops and doing other sawdust tricks for the multitude.

While filling a stage engagement one time, however, Nat and his husky wife engaged in a quarrel which ended in Nat being thrown bodily from their dressing room.

It was claimed afterward, but never verified, that he was thrown through the door. A friend, passing at the moment, rushed to Willis' assistance. Nat raised himself on one elbow, rubbed a bump on his head and remarked: "I should have married the horse."

Today's Talk

UNDER THE SILENT TREES

Every man and woman should, sometime during the year, visit the country and so forget everything else that they may commune anew with the silent forces of the wild.

Every year my friend, Chief Beckman, who conducts a camp on the shores of Lake Champlain, welcomes me for a little visit. He gives me his choicest tent right on the edge of the lake under thick, great pines.

I retire early. The ends of the tent are rolled up so that I lie with only a shelter above my head. The waters of the lake romp and play under the stars, and when there is a moon, each tiny wavelet tosses a smile to me as I feast upon the breath of the cool night.

The other evening I went to my tent earlier than usual, for I was lonely. There it was that those beautiful lines by Amelia Welby came to me, and I give them to you:

"The twilight hours like birds flew by
So gently and so free,
Ten thousand stars were in the sky,
Ten thousand in the sea.

"For every wave with dimple cheek
That leaped upon the air,
Had caught a star in its embrace
And held it, trembling there."

Under the silent trees, when all is night about you, all the pride and conceit of a man seem dead. Just the simple God in his heart remains.

I thought of those I loved most as I awaited sleep in my tent. I wished that I might just then have at least one moment in which to tell each of my love and affection. I thought of my mother who left me so very long ago, but who seemed so near that she might have gone away just yesterday. I meditated upon all my past failures and my little successes.

I thought of the great open spaces and the thick woods and the mirrors of water that dot the land, really make us feel our smallness and spur us on to better and higher aims.

Above one of my bookcases is a beautiful etching by Legros—an old man with hat in hand meditating under a great tree. I couldn't live happily for long unless a tree was handy where I might go for many a silent hour.

MITZI TAKES A NEW INTEREST IN THINGS

Jay V. Jav

Polly, Mitzi and the Goofer are arguing. They have been arguing for some time. Dad dismisses the whole performance by saying they are getting on one another's nerves. Well, maybe! Mitzi looks fairly handsome in a black grosgrain ribbon hat with a coccade of pleated ribbon on the side.

Now Dad has a remedy for almost everything on this trip. As usual he brings the argument to an end and provides entertainment. Have they met his young friends from Milwaukee? They haven't. Mitzi is registering interest under that large brimmed hat with the ribbon over her ear.

The young man from Milwaukee is also registering—well, intense interest, earnest admiration, or more. It looks serious to the Goofer. Well, he rather likes the young lady with the turban hat with the fringe around the top. Dad was right in providing new sights of one kind or another.

Mitzi is no longer bored. No, indeed, she has so many questions to ask the Milwaukee Young Man. You know, she wants to know about the climate, and the Lake, and the Parks. She is going to be well informed, too. Polly is going to get a few questions in herself. Polly's hat is upturned with a bow joining crushed crown and brim.

FOOTBALL OUTLOOK AT CENTRAL BRIGHT AS OPENER NEARING

Squad Shows Well Against Beaver In Practice Tilt

Football outlook at Central High school this season brightened considerably when the varsity first string eleven and subs snapped through a long practice scrimmage game with Beaver Creek High school in fine fashion Tuesday afternoon, emerging with a 13 to 0 victory.

Under the careful guidance of Coach Kolb the squad is beginning to take on that delicate veneer and fine polish indicating a workmanlike style of play and machine-like precision in the practical playing of the game.

Thus far in the maelstrom of heady scrimmage with the scrubs, Cedarville College and Beaver, Kolb's favorite team has escaped the injury jinx although the squad appears to be putting as much energy into every play that characterized Central eleven of past years.

Welcome news to the Central camp, with the opening game of the season with the O. S. and S. O. Home set for Friday at 3:30 p. m., came Tuesday in the form of the return of Bill Clemans, first string center in 1925.

Clemans reported in uniform for the first time and in the best of condition. His return greatly boosts the local chances for a successful grid season. The veteran lineman will probably be converted into a backfield man this year however, because of a dearth of experienced players behind the line.

Central's 1926 eleven is still some what of a mystery other than that followers of the Blue and White point to a successful season. It remains to be seen what the new crop of football candidates will contribute to the strength of the team.

Coach Kolb and Captain Marshall are much concerned over what the showing of the team will be against the O. S. and S. O. Home Friday. The line is rather strong again this season and the backfield is light and fast. Captain Marshall is a fixture in the backfield and will probably play quarter. "Bull Dog" Smith is capable of filling the full-back job, with Morton, Clemans, Gibney and others battling for half back positions.

Central showed in the first half of the Beaver game that the team has developed a fair offensive but is strong on the defensive end. The team played the final half after running up thirteen points, in rather listless fashion and never more than once was the ball in Beaver territory during this stage of the contest.

Beaver presented a green but husky eleven, one that looks like the class of the country schools in the county that may be represented by football teams this fall.

Ouch! Beans Smack Reds Again

Cincinnati's hopes of annexing the National League pennant went glimmering as the Boston Braves defeated the pride of the Queen City for the third straight time 4 to 0, Tuesday.

Boston, the seventh place club that specializes in bumping over logical pennant contenders, simply caused the Reds to fade entirely out of the picture as vital flag contenders.

St. Louis, however, is also having its troubles in the East and missed a golden opportunity to practically clinch the flag by dropping a game to Brooklyn 4 to 3.

Thus the two-game leeway between the teams remained the same.

The Reds still have an outside chance to be in at the death but the team seems mired in the worst batting slump of the year and has been unable to take advantage of its unlimited opportunities to overcome the Cardinal lead.

Cincinnati now opens a three-game series with the lowly Philadelphia outfit while St. Louis continues to battle with the Brooklyn and New York teams.

By winning three out of their four remaining contests, St. Louis can win the pennant as the Reds, by winning their four remaining games, would still be one full game behind. Even if the Cards break even in the quartet of games the Reds must win every game to obtain a tie.

But Cincinnati is not quite giving up the ghost and Red fans are hoping the Ohio team, by some miracle, can create that tie in the last meeting with St. Louis, September 26. In such an event, a post-season series of three games would be necessary to decide the race.

But with all, I can't see where he can lose unless a foul is called against him.

If the fight should go over five rounds it would be weird. Tunney stands up too straight and in the several times I saw him at Stroussburg, he was forced and caught on the ropes time after time by his sparring partners. He is a backer-up.

Dempsey. It appears to me, trained in Atlantic City for the purpose of catching a running opponent and Dempsey can catch Tunney in five rounds. I think that Dempsey will win in two rounds if Tunney swaps punches with him and if Tunney gets on his bicycle, Dempsey will win because he will "out-know" him and force him and out-fight him.

No manufactured fighter is ever going to take Dempsey's title. The fighter who beats him will have to be a real fighter because Dempsey in the Firpo fight showed that he ranks with the best of the old-timers when it comes to the instinct and natural disposition of a winner.

If Dempsey got away with fouls committed technically against Firpo it was not his fault. It was the fault of the referee and the seconds for Firpo.

The reason I am talking so much about fouls is that Tunney will have some smart men in his corner, topping with Billy Gibson and Jimmy Bronson and they have been in the game long enough to know you never make a mistake in claiming anything you can get away with.

I don't believe that Dempsey ever committed an intentional foul, but I saw him hit low several times in Atlantic City when he was sparring with Tommy Loughran and Martin Burke. He hit Loughran several times in the groin and once far back on the hip and the rules provide that the rabbit punch and the kidney blow can't be used.

In the old days we used to feint with the left hand to draw the guard of our opponents up or down and then cross with a right hand. Dempsey does more than feint. He throws the punch right through and he puts himself in the danger of having his hand knocked down by a boxing stroke so that it hits under the belt.

Dempsey admits that he hit low punches against Gibbons in Shelby, but he insists that Gibbons knocked his punches down.

Dempsey is not one-half the fighter he was when he defeated Willard in Toledo. His legs are going back on him and he knows it. He is the fighter he was when he beat Firpo for the same reason.

DEMPSEY CAN LOSE ONLY ON FOUL SAYS LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION

BY JACK MCCAULIFFE
Unbeaten Lightweight World's Champion, Written For The United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. Sept. 22.—Unless a foul is called and allowed by the referee, I can't see that Jack Dempsey has a chance to lose the heavyweight championship of the world here tomorrow night when he meets Gene Tunney.

Dempsey is not a foul fighter, but he knows every trick of the trade and he takes advantage of every opportunity which has made and kept him a champion.

Despite the wise money that is being placed on Tunney, I think that the duration of the fight is up to Tunney. If he will stand up and trade punches as he has said he would do, it will be a short affair and after looking at the Firpo fight, I am of the opinion that anything might happen in a free slugging match.

If I were the manager of Tunney I would tell him to go and sock with Dempsey. If Tunney has a knockout punch he would have his best chance trading punches and if he hasn't a knockout punch, he has no chance to beat Dempsey by boxing because Dempsey has to be beaten by punches and plenty of punches.

No manufactured fighter is ever going to take Dempsey's title. The fighter who beats him will have to be a real fighter because Dempsey in the Firpo fight showed that he ranks with the best of the old-timers when it comes to the instinct and natural disposition of a winner.

But with all, I can't see where he can lose unless a foul is called against him.

If the fight should go over five rounds it would be weird. Tunney stands up too straight and in the several times I saw him at Stroussburg, he was forced and caught on the ropes time after time by his sparring partners. He is a backer-up.

Dempsey. It appears to me, trained in Atlantic City for the purpose of catching a running opponent and Dempsey can catch Tunney in five rounds. I think that Dempsey will win in two rounds if Tunney swaps punches with him and if Tunney gets on his bicycle, Dempsey will win because he will "out-know" him and force him and out-fight him.

No manufactured fighter is ever going to take Dempsey's title. The fighter who beats him will have to be a real fighter because Dempsey in the Firpo fight showed that he ranks with the best of the old-timers when it comes to the instinct and natural disposition of a winner.

If Dempsey got away with fouls committed technically against Firpo it was not his fault. It was the fault of the referee and the seconds for Firpo.

The reason I am talking so much about fouls is that Tunney will have some smart men in his corner, topping with Billy Gibson and Jimmy Bronson and they have been in the game long enough to know you never make a mistake in claiming anything you can get away with.

Hold! You need not stroke my beard nor ask how goes the day. For I am here to have my whiskers sheared, my face massaged, my eyebrows clipped. But, say! 'Tis a fault you barbers have of sticking in, of finding out one's biz. You need a licking. But by the way, the one who trimmed me last got his. What then? 'Tis such a tale as I cannot repeat. Of whiskers, razors, and e'en the barber lying in the street. Ah, yes, beware! thou knave. Take care my hair, And now the shave.

Your voice is sweet—year! sweet as the song Of the braying ass, Oh, insurance agent. 'Tis wrong to lead You on, to give you hopes to pay that family when I pass, To let you dream of premiums that you'll get. I'll not. Away With you to yonder graveyard that is filled with flowers That he got. He was an agent, too, insurance was his line

Say no more, thou woman, for such thou art and will be By God's plan. Oh, calm thy voice and have a heart, Rave on no more, but close thy can. Thou gossip, why strive you another's virtue to destroy? Thou are a woman. I'll not hurt you. But let's sit here Upon this pile of stones. She was a woman, too. But, now—well, she's a pile of bones. She's quit her gossip for all times. 'Twas the bloodiest of crimes. But who is there to say that I should have let her Live to gossip to this day? There's none.

Come, give me that cigar, for I must smoke to keep Me cool. A careless word might make me choke thee, With politicians I'm such a fool. Why I might harken to your plea and feel your warm breath Upon my brow. But, yet somehow I have a feeling that 'Tis wise to spare me, to let me wipe my wish. One does so easily these days. Poor Fish! His name was Joe and off he came and told how I Should cast my vote—we were on the river in a boat— He struggled so—but I caused him to die.

The Girl Who Dared

By May Christie

Chapter VII THE SHOCK

"Won four hundred and fifty dollars!" gasped Mary Forrest, turning deathly white, and putting a groping hand out to the ship's rail to steady herself. "Oh, no! Oh, no! It couldn't be! It would be too glorious!" Then, staring piteously at Luella, then at Philip Andover, she panted out imploringly: "You wouldn't be so cruel as to make up such a story, just to tease me?" Her voice shook.

"It's quite true," said Philip with keen eyes on her face. "The result of the sweep was out some minutes ago, and is now posted in the smoking room. Yours was the winning number."

The girl took a quick step back covering her face with her two hands for a moment as though the dazzling vision were too much for her. Then darting forward, to his astonishment she seized Philip's hand in hers, and shook it, barely realising what she did.

"It's wonderful! It's the best thing I could hear! I'll never, never forget you were the one who told me first!" she panted, her pale face flushed and radiant. "$450.00!" She wrung his hand again. "Oh, can I have the money now...at once? Will they really give it to me?"

Before he could reply, she was off, half-running, in the direction of the smoking-room.

"Now, did you ever?" exclaimed Luella, staring after the slim, hurrying figure. "Who'd have dreamt she had the money-craze as bad as that?"

Philip opened his lips as though to speak, then closed them. He was astonished and disappointed and puzzled all at the same time. The quiet little secretary was the last person in the world he would have connected with a gamble of this sort.

"I saw her in the smoking-room this morning with her admirer of last night, Mr. Rogers," continued Luella. "These Australians are always on for a bet of any kind. No doubt!—with an indulgent smile—he bought the sweep ticket for her. Then she added, as though it were an after-thought: 'I hope uncle doesn't get to hear of it. He's rather fussy.'"

"Oh, come, Miss Luella," said Philip uneasily. "His supervision of Miss Forrest doesn't go as far as that surely."

Luella laughed in a forced way. "Uncle's funny. You see, he advanced Miss Forrest three or four weeks' salary, and of course it's expensive bringing her up the Atlantic, and all that. He took her on as his secretary just because she seemed so quiet and demure, but as aunt says, you never can tell with these Southern girls."

"You forget that my father was a Southerner," said Philip with some dignity, yet with a tiny twinkle in his eye.

"Oh, well, we're all Americans, aren't we?" compromised Luella.

"I always thought so, but apparently in law, I'm nothing of the sort. I was born near London, and though I came to the United States with my parents when I was an infant, and lived there, off and on, till I was twenty, I never took out papers—indeed I never occurred to me that it was necessary."

Luella looked amazed. They were strolling round the deck together, and she said:

"But your father had become an American citizen years and years ago?"

"Apparently he hadn't. He was—a little odd."

Luella had heard that the old man was hard and selfish, and had shown little affection for either of his sons. When they were mere boys their mother had died. The eldest boy had gone off to Australia, where he had never done much good and some years ago he had died out there.

Philip, at twenty, had gone to Paris to study Art. The World War had broken out just after that. At first he had driven ambulances with the American crowd in Paris, but shortly afterwards had trained in a flying school at Pau, and joined the Escadrille squadron of the French aviation.

"You were in the American forces, so you must be rated as American?" Luella persisted.

Philip shook his head.

"No, I fought with the French. A heap of Americans were with us."

"You're a sort of mongrel, then," Luella laughed, giving him a coquettish glance from under long lashes. "Now comes this property in Cuba. What does that make you, pray?"

"Happy, I hope." He joined in her laugh.

"And in Cuba you will paint to your heart's content. But don't you think you'll be just a little—lonely?" Another look from under her long lashes.

"No, I'll love it. Apart from my painting, there will be a quite a lot to do in managing the place. It's big, you see. There's a farm—a hacienda, I believe they call it. And I mean to study up about tobacco. I shall have to."

rest had won the pool, Philip Andover had somehow seemed to lose all interest in the secretary girl.

It wasn't because he actually disapproved of what she'd done, Luella knew that Philip was no prig. But the "grasping" light on Mary Forrest's face when the announcement of her winnings had been made to her—the adjective was Luella's—had no doubt "put him off" Luella thought.

She herself too, had been clever. She had contrived to hide her own worship of money and material things, and had "played up" to Philip in praiseworthy fashion.

She had completely eradicated the little carping impression in Philip's mind that she—Luella—was overfond of this world's goods.

In talking to an artist, Art was everything. Having been on and off the stage for years, it was easy for Luella to adopt this role.

"Such a pretty frock!" Her companion, carried away by the vision of beauty and sweetness and sympathy that was Luella, touched a fold of her gossamer gown. "But though it's simple, it's expensive. You'd never make a poor man's wife."

"You're quite wrong. I made this dress myself," fibbed Luella glibly. "And as for marrying a poor man, every real woman would, of course, and so would I, if I loved him. You can be quite sure of that."

And now, speaking of money by the beautiful, here comes my pet aversion!"

Philip looked up as John Rogers approached. The latter sought Luella for a stroll.

Sweetly she excused herself. Now or never was her chance with Philip.

"I'm tired. Do get Miss Forrest instead." When the Australian, crestfallen, had departed, she turned to Philip. Her fair face had an ineffable softness and a sort of radiance in the starlight.

"Though Mr. Rogers had twice the money he has—and I believe he's very, very rich—he'd never in the world appeal to me. The man I'd want to marry would be one so different, Philip. Someone with kindred tastes, and a love of all things beautiful. Someone who loved simple pleasures, I'm sick and tired of the empty social round. I'm weary of the glamour and glitter of the stage. I long for a new life, Philip, with a real companion. I know that, if the right man came along I could care—so awfully much."

And the thought that Luella had purposely dropped from its usually rather strident tones to a low, sweet cadence trailed off into a significant silence.

Now the beauty of the night, the stars that spangled the blue heavens, and of Luella, had gone to Philip's head, so that a sort of dizziness swept over him. Romance... companionship... the sort of sympathy this girl was offering him... weren't they only things that really mattered?

It's true that Luella's loveliness had intoxicated him more than once before. But a "something" he couldn't entirely fathom had held him back on each occasion from uttering the fateful words that would bring about a definite engagement.

"You really don't care about money, Luella?" His firm, slender hand closed over hers. It gave her quite a thrill. "A year ago in Aiken, you must have known how strongly attracted I was to you."

She opened her eyes wide in the starlight in well-feigned surprise.

"And I, too, Philip. But if you cared for me, why didn't you tell me so?"

"I was afraid."

"Of a refusal?"

"No, Of—you."

That was an odd answer, thought Luella through her triumph. But of course the poor, dear, simple fellow had placed her on a pedestal. She was a little dashed when he said bluntly:

"I didn't think anybody as keen about money as you seemed—forgive my frankness—would make a man happy."

Luella contrived to keep the acid out of her voice as she replied:

"You were quite mistaken about me."

"Abducted" Feminine Evangelist Faces Legal Action

Mrs. McPherson explains and responds to cheers.

Aimee Semple McPherson, the Los Angeles feminine evangelist whose disappearance early this summer created a national sensation, now faces prosecution for a "conspiracy to defeat justice," as a result of the conflicting and complex "explanations" of her disappearance. Her arrest, together with her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, K. G. Ormiston, former radio operator for Mrs. McPherson, J. D. Martin and Mrs. Wiseman-Sielaff, was ordered after sensational revelations had been made in connection with money paid for "evidence." Upper photo shows Mrs. McPherson relating her experiences to Los Angeles police authorities; below she is seen receiving the welcome of her great congregation after her "abduction."

my character. I never cared about money. Aunt was always urging me to marry one of my rich suitors, and it was she who probably put the notion into your head."

Philip moved nearer the enchantress, a light shining in his fine eyes.

"If I'd asked you then, Luella, would there have been any hope for me?"

Her lovely head was raised to his.

"You mean—you're in love—with me, Philip?" Her voice was low and crooning.

He nodded. This strange, heady feeling—this urge to take the exquisite girl in his arms—it must be love!

"Would you have married me when I was poor, Luella? That time's all past and done with now, and if you'll have me as I am, with the future all provided for, I'll be content. But you do mean that you care for simple pleasures, don't you?"

dear? You're sincere in what you say about money not really mattering—" he broke off anxiously.

Aloud she answered, ever so gently, with her eyes upturned to the man beside her:

"I care for you, Philip, and not one jot for your money, if that's what you're driving at! If you'd asked me a year ago, I'd have said 'Yes' right away. I've always been fond of you, ever since we met. And if you lost every cent of your inheritance now, I'd only be sorry for your sake dear, and not for mine—because the fact that you've come into this property hasn't counted with me in the least."

"You darling!" Her proximity set his veins on fire. His hands trembled as they slipped about her slender form. "Luella! Lovely one! It was just that thought—that idiotic thought—that held me back. I've always wanted you, desired you. When—when will you marry me, Luella? I want you so!"

Conscious of the spell that she had woven over him, a look of triumph flashed into her eyes, but Philip, his powers of discernment, weakened by her physical magic, did not see that gleam.

"Any time, Philip darling!" Her lips were almost touching his. He could feel her perfumed breath, a sheer intoxication. "We could get the Captain to marry us—"

A sudden, discreet cough made the lovers turn around to see a cabin-boy beside them, holding something in his hand.

"Beg pardon, sir—it's a radio-gram—for you, sir!" He handed Philip an envelope, coughed again apologetically, and stood waiting for an answer.

"I'd better glance at it right away," Philip rose and went over to a lantern hanging some yards distant. He drew out the paper from its envelope... scanned it once... and twice... and then a third time....

With a sudden premonition that all wasn't well, Luella rose to join her lover. In the lantern rays she saw his face was very white and startled looking.

"Phil, what is it? Tell me!"

He did not answer, did not turn. His eyes were fixed on the disturbing message.

"Phil, I have the right to know—" He swung round at that, staring at her. Then with a queer, short laugh he hurled his bomb.

"You've just said you'd love me even if I were poor, Luella. You've just told me that if I lost every cent of my inheritance it would make no difference to your feeling for me! But, my God! you didn't know how soon—you'd no idea how quickly fate would take you up on that—"

"What's happened?" She reached out a shaking hand to get the radio message. "Oh, what does it say?"

"I'm not the heir to my father's property at all," said Philip grimly. "My brother in Australia left a son, it seems, and he inherits everything. I'm just as poor—no poorer! than I was before!"

BLAST IS MYSTERY; 17 ARE INJURED

PENSACOLA FLA. SUFFERS HEAVY DAMAGE

SILENCE OF TWENTY FOUR HOURS BROKEN WITH FIRST REPORT

None Dead In City—
South American Storm
Kills 300

Pensacola, Fla., the last of the major cities of the south to be heard from since it was visited by the full fury of the hurricane sweeping Florida and eastern gulf coast, reported by radio today that it had suffered heavy property damage, but no lives had been lost within the city. Three were reported dead in the Pensacola district.

This word, which came out first in a message from the commandant of the Navy Radio Station, relieved twenty-four hours of anxiety, during which no word had come from the city since a dispatch late Monday night which showed the hurricane was about to descend.

Mobile, which was in partial communication yesterday, today was able to give a full account of its damage. It suffered only slightly, compared to the heavy losses Florida cities sustained.

A hurricane in South America, independent of the one which has swept the eastern gulf section, was reported today in dispatches from Asuncion, Uruguay. It took a toll of 300 lives, the dispatches said.

In Florida martial law has been lifted and normal conditions, except for the wrecked buildings and the demoralization they continue to hold, are being restored.

The list of known dead stood at 407 today in Southeastern Florida while three dead near Pensacola made the total for the storm in Florida 410.

Miami last night had electric lights for the first time since Saturday. Rail and wire communication gradually was restored.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—Serious damage to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, in the West Indian Hurricane, was reported to naval communications here over night. The message said great damage had been done planes, hangars, houses, shops and storehouses, but up to the time of filing the message last night there had been no reports of serious injuries to personnel.

The station's water supply was cut, however, and there was no light, water or power.

Red Cross messages said only that Pensacola had been hard hit. The report at the Weather bureau last night was that the storm was diminishing.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 22—Property damage estimated at a million dollars was done in Mobile by the hurricane which struck here Monday night, but no loss of life occurred.

Broken windows constituted the chief damage to the more substantial buildings. Telephone and power wires are demoralized and electricity was available only in the downtown section last night. Train service is at a standstill.

The tug Echo reached here after visiting the town of Fairhope, between Mobile and Pensacola, and reported $800,000 damage there but no lives lost.

ATTORNEYS ARGUE ROAD INJUNCTION

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 22—Attorneys today started their arguments in the suit to enjoin the state highway department from letting a contract for construction of the Mayfield Road to the Dorsey Construction Company, of Findlay.

Testifying as the last witness, late yesterday, W. E. Dorsey denied he ever contributed to the campaign fund of Governor V. Donahoe.

John A. Cline, a taxpayer who brought the suit charged that campaign contributions were responsible for awarding the contract to Dorsey.

COMMITTEE ACTS ON RESERVATIONS

URGED ACCEPTANCE WITH APPROVAL OF FORMULA AT GENEVA

Must Negotiate With League On Advisory
Question

GENEVA, Sept. 22—Acceptance of all the American reservations to the world court protocol was recommended by the drafting committee of fourteen today with the sole provision that the United States should negotiate an understanding with the League of Nations council with respect to the manner of expressing American consent to the court rendering an advisory opinion.

The committee of fourteen was appointed by the conference of Hague court signatories here to find a formula for accepting the United States reservations. The committee today adopted a draft of the formula outlined in the foregoing.

Should the United States object to the court giving an advisory opinion on any question to which the United States was not a party, this objection would have the same force and effect as if the United States were a member of the league and voted against such an advisory opinion.

All signatories of the world court protocol will be requested to use their formula, devised by the committee today, as a basis for their individual replies to the United States with respect to the senate reservations.

The formula still would have to be accepted by the full conference of world court signatories and then by the United States. The drafters of the formula sought a means of safeguarding the rights of the present signatories while at the same time making the formula in such form that President Coolidge and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg could accept it without further reference to the senate.

HOOPER WILL SPEAK

FLORIDA CITIES RECOVERING FROM EFFECTS OF HURRICANE

Additional Bodies Found Bring Total Up To 407 In Stricken Area—Loss Estimated Now At $100,000,000

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 22—Miami and other cities in southwestern Florida today were rapidly recovering from the effects of Saturday's hurricane.

Rescue workers found additional bodies of dead, which brought the death list in Miami to 135. The total dead in the storm area today totaled 407. It was believed that by tonight practically all of the dead would be identified and the casualties definitely known.

It was believed that the total would go much higher.

Burial of the dead cast a gloom over the city. Caskets were sent from outside cities and all day graves were dug and filled again in the cemeteries.

In the cities and through the outlying districts squads of railroad workers repaired the tracks while linemen for telephone, telegraph and power companies restored communication and power transmission.

Reports gathered here show that the list of known dead in the storm area now stands as follows:

Miami	135
Miami Beach	52
Hollywood	80
Moorehaven	40
Hialeah and vicinity	50
At various points	50
Total	407

The property loss in greater Miami is officially reported at $100,000,000 by insurance adjusters. Approximately ten per cent is protected by insurance, the probable recovery, the adjusters said, would not total more than $15,000,000.

Tetanus anti-toxin was brought here last night from Richmond, Va., by Lieut. Bissell, of the U. S. Air service.

HUGH DILMAN YACHT
DESTROYED BY FIRE
EARLY WEDNESDAY

Greene County Boy,
Wireless Chief, Called
For Help

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—A mysterious fire destroyed the palatial steam yacht Delphine, owned by Mrs. Hugh Dilman, the former Mrs. Anna T. Dodge, of Detroit, in the Hudson River, early today. The loss was placed by Dilman at $1,000,000.

The crew of fifty men fought a dogged three hour battle with the flames. Fireboats played water on the blazing craft. Firemen on land aided but the fire was out of control before the crew was able to bring the yacht to the docks.

The ship had been anchored for several days in North River. The Dilmans had gone to a theater, when the fire broke out, around midnight. The ship's wireless summoned fire boats and headed for the 86th Street docks in the Hudson.

Earl Weaver, son of C. L. Weaver, Wilmington Pike, and wireless chief of the Delphine, wired his father late Wednesday morning of his safety.

The telegram, from New York, reported the crew is safe and that all passengers had been landed safely.

Weaver, it is reported, summoned help by wireless. He has been wireless operator of the yacht since last April.

EXPLOSION WRECKS YOUNGSTOWN STORE AND LEVELS HOUSES

One Victim Believed Dying—Fire Adds To Danger
—Estimate Damage At $300,000
From Blast

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 22.—A mysterious explosion today completely wrecked the Youngstown Grocery Co., leveled three houses adjoining it and may have killed several persons.

The blast was felt over the entire city, threw people in the immediate neighborhood into panic and brought great crowds to the scene.

Residents in a radius of five blocks were blown out of bed. Fire which broke out immediately following the explosion made it impossible to gain entrance to wrecked homes to learn the casualties.

Several persons are known to be injured severely. Many of these were cut by glass, flying from their windows.

ONE VICTIM DYING
One man is believed dying in Youngstown hospital. He is Frank Rodger.

First arrivals at the scene of the blast found him in the street. Fritz Braun, address unknown, also is in Youngstown hospital, seriously cut. He will recover.

Another unidentified man, also badly cut was taken to Youngstown hospital.

The explosion, which occurred at 4:10 this morning, caused damage tentatively estimated at $300,000.

Persons near the scene of the blast reported seeing a mass of timbers and bricks thrown several hundred feet into the air when the charge let go. Persons walking on the street in the vicinity, were subjected to a rain of wreckage.

POLICE SEEK CAUSE
Police seeking the cause of the explosion began investigation of a letter received by G. Silvestri, president of the Youngstown Grocery Co., which warned him against price cutting and told him, if he continued the practice he would be "put out of business."

The letter was postmarked Sharon, Pa.

Silvestri, however, said he did not believe there was any connection between the letter and the explosion. However, he could not advance a theory for the dynamiting.

The last person to leave the building yesterday was Silvestri. The blast severed high tension wires in the street and these lay on the ground, occasionally sputtering and hissing.

A cordon of police was placed about the district to keep sightseers from interfering with the investigation.

FIGHT PRINCIPALS REST PREPARATORY TO THURSDAY BOUT

Only Few Seats Left For Dempsey And Tun-
ney Go.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22—After weeks of training for the richest prize in the catalogue of sports, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, who are to meet here tomorrow night for the world's heavyweight championship, rested today in their training camps at Atlantic City, N. J.

Dempsey had surrounded him, a staff of New York and Chicago detectives to protect him from summons and process servers and his lawyers were here to answer a couple of suits and injunctions today.

Gene Normille, Dempsey's business manager and Johnny Broderick, sergeant detective of the gangster squad in New York, were on the scene early.

Normille said that he came here for the purpose of arranging a place for Dempsey to stay after noon tomorrow when he has to appear here to weigh in for the fight.

Bob Farrell and Harvey Boyle, two members of the Pennsylvania boxing commission said that the police department had been asked to keep the crowds away from the office of the exposition, while the weighing is being done.

Tex Rickard's ticket office has a few seats in the seventieth row for $27.50 and the prominent hotels had nothing for anything.

The city was filled with delegations to fraternal conventions and with tourists to the Centennial Exposition and very little professional talk about the fight was heard.

Some New York money was reported to be in the hands of agents to offer at the best odds available that Tunney would win the fight. But there was no talkers here and it was said that all the smart money was being taken and laid by the race track men in New York.

START INJUNCTION AGAINST BIG BOUT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—A second injunction suit against the Dempsey-Tunney battle today was started by Ralph B. Evans, representing the Coliseum Club of Chicago.

The bill in equity filed in common pleas court, makes the Sesqui-Centennial Association, together with Frank Ener, Harvey Boyle and Harry Farrell, Pennsylvania state boxing commissioners defendants.

It asks to restrain the Sesqui-Centennial and the Boxing Commission from permitting the world's title battle tomorrow night, setting forth that Dempsey had contracted with the club to fight Harry Wills on Sept. 26, 1925, any place in the U. S., the club might select outside of New York State.

WOMAN HELD AFTER CUTTING HUSBAND WITH POCKET KNIFE

Mrs. Eunice Cross, 38, colored, inflicted painful but not serious stab wounds upon her husband Robert Cross, 49, colored, at their home, 533 E. Main St., as a result of an altercation between the man and wife at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Unaware that the blade of the pocket knife she had wielded had penetrated deep into his back, grazing a rib and narrowly missing his heart, Mrs. Cross is reported to have summoned police to effect the arrest of her husband, who had previously threatened her with a razor, she said.

Mrs. Cross pleaded not guilty to an affidavit signed by her husband charging cutting with intent to wound before Mayor John W. Prugh Tuesday morning and was held to the grand jury under $300 bail. She was to be released as soon as bond was available.

She was arrested by Patrolman Fred Jones, who answered her call for assistance.

Cross' injuries were treated by Dr. H. H. Hawkins. Had the knife blade not glanced off a rib the stab wound probably have proven fatal, police say.

Police are uninformed as to the nature of the quarrel but say an argument preceded the cutting affray. Cross was seated and bending down to tie his shoe lace while dressing when his wife suddenly whipped out a knife and imbedded the blade in his back, according to police information. Despite

PLAN OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL DRIVE HERE THURSDAY FOR $1,000

Plans are going forward for the one day drive to be made Thursday by the Federated Parent-Teachers' Association of the city for the purpose of deriving funds for the Opportunity School work.

In speaking of the drive which is for the purpose of obtaining $1,000 or more for the special work an official of the association said: "The project which has been operated by the Federated P. T. A. of Xenia for the past few years has always met with a deserved success in its reception by the Xenian public. The funds which have been raised in the successive one-day drives have been put to excellent use in a field that needed attention badly, and which would be without attention if the Association should exclude this project from its activities. Modern social service has emphasized the necessity of expending public funds in a way in which the results may be greatest and reach the farthest. The Federation of the P. T. A. organizations in Xenia has chosen wisely in directing its efforts toward the provision of physical necessities that would promote the health and comfort, and consequently the educational advancement of Xenian children.

"While a great portion of the funds raised by the Association has been spent in providing lunches for the children in the Opportunity schools the children in the other schools of the city are also provided for in an ample way. McKinley, Spring Hill and Orient Hill schools may and do send children to the High School cafeteria for the lunches provided by the P. T. A. The project is not confined to one school or group of children but includes all Xenian children who may profit from the providing of warm lunches.

"The value of the work for which funds are asked is all the more apparent when we consider that other social agencies cannot make provision for taking care of the school children in this way. Educational officials, physicians and others who are interested and have investigated the effect of proper nourishment upon a child's educational progress appreciate the tremendous importance of careful attention to this phase of the work of the school.

"As an integral part of the school system, the P. T. A. Federation deserves the support of the public in the same splendid fashion of past years, and every teacher and principal and school official heartily recommend this project to the people of Xenia.

"Those who can see every day the beneficial results of this activity are more than willing to recommend enthusiastically the efforts of the Federation to secure the necessary amounts to carry on the work.

"That the public may know of the extent and type of the assistance it gives through its donations to the P. T. A. a brief summary of the work of last year may be of interest. From October to May of the school year 1925-26, 7850 warm lunches were provided in cases where otherwise the children would have had but a cold lunch and more often no lunch at all. The number of children cared for each day ranged from a score in the autumn and spring to seventy-five in the bad days of mid-winter. The donors to this cause in past years can estimate through these figures how much was accomplished through their generosity.

The Federation of the P. T. A. organizations in Xenia has chosen wisely in directing its efforts toward the provision of physical necessities that would promote the health and comfort, and consequently the educational advancement of Xenian children.

"While a great portion of the funds raised by the Association has been spent in providing lunches for the children in the Opportunity schools the children in the other schools of the city are also provided for in an ample way. McKinley, Spring Hill and Orient Hill schools may and do send children to the High School cafeteria for the lunches provided by the P. T. A. The project is not confined to one school or group of children but includes all Xenian children who may profit from the providing of warm lunches.

"The value of the work for which funds are asked is all the more apparent when we consider that other social agencies cannot make provision for taking care of the school children in this way. Educational officials, physicians and others who are interested and have investigated the effect of proper nourishment upon a child's educational progress appreciate the tremendous importance of careful attention to this phase of the work of the school.

"As an integral part of the school system, the P. T. A. Federation deserves the support of the public in the same splendid fashion of past years, and every teacher and principal and school official heartily recommend this project to the people of Xenia.

"Those who can see every day the beneficial results of this activity are more than willing to recommend enthusiastically the efforts of the Federation to secure the necessary amounts to carry on the work.

"That the public may know of the extent and type of the assistance it gives through its donations to the P. T. A. a brief summary of the work of last year may be of interest. From October to May of the school year 1925-26, 7850 warm lunches were provided in cases where otherwise the children would have had but a cold lunch and more often no lunch at all. The number of children cared for each day ranged from a score in the autumn and spring to seventy-five in the bad days of mid-winter. The donors to this cause in past years can estimate through these figures how much was accomplished through their generosity.

A Happy Woman

A MAN dreams of wealth, success and power. A woman dreams of a home of her own and babies to love. Happy is the young woman whose dream is fulfilled. With good health, housework is not a burden. Her home echoes to the prattle of healthy children. She must not fail those tiny hands. Her husband is still her comrade and confidant, sharing her new responsibilities. She is content. Happy, too, is the older woman who holds her children's children in her arms and lives to see a new generation dreaming dreams of its own.

A young girl in Iowa was in such a weakened condition that she had to leave school. One day, after being in poor health for about two years, she picked up an advertising booklet and read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "I began to take your medicine," she writes. "Now I am a housekeeper with six children and I have taken it before each was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."

One ballot will contain the state and county ticket which will include slates entered by the Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Commonwealth Land parties; a second the local and state judicial ticket and the third the proposal to establish a County Library District.

Voters in other parts of the county will receive from three to five ballots depending upon local issues.

Consolidated School District a three mill levy for two years, Ross Twp. Rural School District a two mill levy for five years and Cedarville Twp. Rural School District a two mill levy for five years.

Mr. Short estimates that it will be necessary to print 16,000 ballots for the state ticket, 16,000 for the judicial ticket, 14,000 for the library proposition, and 4,500 for the various proposed tax levies.

Bids for the ballots are being advertised with a view of getting the work done as early as possible and the printing contracts will probably be awarded by the board of elections at their next meeting within two weeks, it is announced.

The Rev. R. Ames Montgomery, D. D., former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, and newly appointed president of Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, delivered the address at the opening exercises of the seminary for the semester Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Montgomery's theme was "The Need of the Times, Prophetic Preaching." Frank L. Stevenson, president of the seminary board of trustees, presided at the exercises, and the invocation was given by the Rev. William H. Tilford, of this city. The Rev. William K. Patterson of Norwood, moderator of the Synod of Ohio, read the Scriptures and the Rev. Lewis Earl Lee led the responsive reading.

Mrs. Montgomery was present with her husband at the opening exercises. Dr. Montgomery and his family will take up their residence in the president's house on the seminary grounds, October 5.

YOUR TOWN AND YOU

Your town boosts you. Why not do as well by the town as it does by you? No citizen is so powerful, none so humble, but what the town is an aid to him in some way or other.

The food that he eats, the clothes he wears, the recreation and amusement that he enjoys, all originate in the town, because the money with which they are procured is made there.

When a fellow boosts his own town he does not stop there. He is performing an act that improves his own condition, for every good word and every good deed has its elevating influence.

A few people are always home-town boosters. They accomplish much in the way of community betterment, and this improves the condition of not only themselves, but also of those who do no boosting at all.

If every citizen would constitute himself a home-town booster the result collectively would be many times as great and opportunities for self improvement would be more numerous.

Think it over in your odd moments. Then get into the boost wagon and hit the pace.

MOST VALUABLE QUALITY

Someone has said that the most valuable human quality, so far as happiness, contentment and joy are concerned, is that quality which enables one to get along with others. This quality enables him to receive pleasant treatment from them and to enjoy their company.

This implies a genius for friendship, and this quality is much more rare than it should be in this old world of ours. It is a quality which should be cultivated. Agreeableness pays big dividends. It is agreeableness that helps one to do team work, and it is team work that multiplies our ability to accomplish things. So the possession of the quality of making friends not only makes for your happiness and contentment, it also helps you to make more of a success of life as a whole.

One must be above taking offense at trifles. He must be able to meet all persons on the plane of friendship. Ability to do this makes him pleasant to live as a member of the family and makes him a good neighbor. Such a man is always well thought of, has plenty of friends, and seldom has occasion to complain of being lonesome. It is rightly called the most valuable quality of human nature.

A NEW COMPETITION

It is doubtful if there ever was a time when the railroad of the country faced a competition so strenuous and so persistent as that represented in the growing bus traffic of the present day.

The railroads once cried loudly for help when the interurbans crowded them, and took away much of their business. But today the bus lines of the nation are slowly running the interurbans and the street car systems out of business, and fast digging into the revenues and the patronage of the railroad companies.

Fifteen years ago the bus was practically unknown. Here and there was a jitney, but the business that it picked up was mostly that which came from the street car systems.

Today the bus is a decided factor in the transportation system of the nation, having grown from nothing to a carrying system, that boasts of 60,000 busses, with 7,500 companies controlling the line.

And how has all of this effected the railroad companies? The figures for 1924 show that the railroad companies took in 200,000,000 fewer fares than in 1920.

But the railroads, it seems, realizing the competition that faces, and knowing the futility of fighting it without weapons, have adopted for themselves the very ones which have taken away their own passengers and their own freight business. The railroad companies are adapting the busses and the trucks to their own use, literally fighting fire with fire as it were.

So while the millions are rolling from railroads to busses and trucks, they are not leaving entirely the railroad systems. For every day sees a greater and greater number of motorized lines opened up or taken over by the railroad companies, to operate as subsidiaries or feeder lines for the steel ones, and thus to garner in for the railroads the coin and the business which would otherwise have gone into other hands.

It is a stiff competition that is being faced. But the railroads seem to have solved the problem as how best to meet it and profit by it.

A primary system of nomination lets the people rule if they will, but often they won't.

Some vacationists are coming back to work, and some are merely coming back.

FLORIDA RESIDENT HERE IS WORRIED

Frank McKay, former Greene County, now a real estate dealer in Miami, Fla., who has been visiting relatives in this vicinity for the last two weeks, is anxious over conditions in his home city. Mr. and Mrs. McKay have been visiting Mr. McKay's brother-in-law, and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lacey, and his brother, Clarence McKay, of New Burlington. They intend to extend their visit a little until conditions following the hurricane which devastated southern Florida have grown more normal. Mr. McKay has been in the real estate business in Miami about two years and his firm has been interested in the development of a subdivision there in which a number of lots have been sold. Mr. McKay says that he and his business partner had been considering just before he left, the removal of their office into one of the large downtown buildings which reports say was seriously damaged by the hurricane. They concluded not to make the change.

East Side - West Side

New York

By Jack O'Donnell

I have a friend in this town who makes a living answering questions about the decoration of houses. If Mrs. Newly Rich wants to know if a tapestry would be better than an old brocade back of her piano, my friend will tell her. Or if Mrs. N. R.'s French education has been neglected and she doesn't know what her neighbor means when she says something about Toile de Jouy, she can get the answer from this decorator of houses.

ger, his guest. After naming the party in rapid succession Hunter and his friend sat down. "It's unfair to a guest to introduce him to six men in one breath," said Dr. Sweeney, who delights in taking Hunter to task. "Two to one he didn't hear one of our names and if he did probably has forgotten them already."

Bizarre ladies of New York are discarding the necklet, fashion's latest gewgaw. The necklet is a plain gold band, about a quarter to half an inch wide, that encircles fair throats even more closely than the choker. It snaps on very much like the old fashioned plain bracelets that our mothers used to wear.

Starting at his right the stranger called, "Mr. Guerin, Mr. Piezotto, Mr. Drew, Mr. Skinner, Dr. Sweeney, Mr. Davis."

These distinguished gentlemen were lunching at the famous round table in the Gramercy Park club when Hunter introduced a stranger.

Later Hunter confided to me that his friend is a memory expert—a chap who writes books on the subject.

Just Folks

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

THE GOLDEN CHANCE There is in life this golden chance For every valiant soul. The unopened poem or romance— Beyond the sum of all we know And all that man has done, Life holds a never-ending row Of glories to be won.

Still waits the canvas for the paint The paper for the pen; Still searches Faith to find a saint Among the ranks of men. Though man, it seems, has traveled far Along achievement's way, His conquests and his triumphs are But splendors for a day. In all that is of paint and print, And marvels which we see, Life gives us but the faintest hint Of splendors yet to be. On still untraveled roads of fame The feet of men shall climb Far nobler goals than our to claim From the rich lap of time. Unreckoned genius yet unborn Un dreamed of deeds shall do, GUEST SANDWICHES We all wish at times, that we could invent some wonderful new dishes to serve our guests after a little afternoon "four" of bridge, or after that simple musical evening, or after our "crowd" returns home with us from a "movie." Yet, the time-honored cup of hot coffee, the sandwich, and the inevitable cake, cannot be improved upon, can they, when it comes to serving our friends what they really like? So let us be original with our sandwiches. And let us choose a light one where a light one is needed, and a nourishing one when our guests are really hungry.

Safety Zones

—FOR— Dollars

HOW WISE INVESTORS INVEST

Three men in Detroit, employed to invest one of the world's largest automobile fortunes, have been on the job about a year now and have invested more than $100,000. Each draws a large salary, running into five figures for this work, and all they have to do is to find safe jobs for dollars. That's all investing is, finding safe jobs for dollars. The three men were employed for two reasons. First, when one of the largest automobile businesses was sold, the money received for it had to be put to work or the fortune, huge as it was would gradually disappear.

Second, the three men represent investment houses of proved honesty and skill in selecting investments.

Investing, or finding safe jobs for dollars, is very similar to finding a good job, business or profession for oneself or for a son or daughter. That frequently is a difficult problem. Likewise, finding a good job at which dollars may work is not always easy. It requires thought and deliberation, not haste and dreams of getting something for nothing. Bootleggers and gamblers, it is said, make fortunes, but no right-thinking parent would approve such a vocation. Nor would he consent to his son or daughter going to work with quacks, frauds, incompetents or strangers concerning whose integrity he knows nothing. There's no chance to gain anything worth while by working with frauds or incompetents. There's still less chance for the dollar entrusted to fakers or incompetents.

The purpose of this series of articles, which will appear exclusive in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican is to show in a practical way how successful investors find safe jobs for their dollars. At bottom the problem of those three Detroit investment specialists, investing more than $100,000,000, is exactly the same as that of the small investor. They must demand just two basic qualities of any investment. Those two qualities are honesty and ability to pay. Promises and hopes of striking oil or gold, or making millions from some new invention or business are worth little or nothing, unless they are backed by honesty and a proved record of successful business achievement. Until he can ascertain these two simple qualities, honesty and ability to pay, the investor should keep his money in the bank, unless he is seeking a gamble or certain loss.

ON Greene County History

EARLIEST TAX LEVY

What did our forefathers spend the money of Greene County for during their incumbency of office? Following the deposition of the levy for Greene County for 1804, as shown by a report dated August 26, 1803:

To the commissioners for selecting a place for the seat of justice, $25; to James Shoden for ballot boxes, $2; to the list of taxable property, $18.75; to the same for Sugar-creek Dam, $200; to the same for Mad River Dam, $12.70; to the grand jury of August term $19.55; to James Barrett and Benjamin Whitman, $12; to William Maxwell, $4.50;

To John Paul for attending as clerk two days and making a list for the sheriff, $12; to the sheriff of ex-officio services, $20; to the clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, $20; to the grand jury for term of Supreme Court, $10.91; to grand jury for December term, $8.07 1/2; to the attorney prosecuting for the state at August term of Common Pleas, $30;

To the same for October term of Supreme Court, $20; to the same for December term of Common Pleas, $20; to sheriff for summoning grand jury for August term, $1.50; to the same for October term of Supreme Court, $2; to the same for December term of Common Pleas, $2.50; to Jacob Shingledecker for repairs done to jail, $9.50; to Joseph Vance for carrying election returns of Sugar-creek Twp. to Cincinnati, $6; to David Huston for ditto, Beaver-creek Twp., $6; probable amount of acts not exhibited, $22; collectors' and treasurer's per cent and depositum, $173.55 1/2. This is a total of $466.04.

The Theatre

When William Anthony McGuire, dramatic blacksmith, brought his "If I Was Rich," play to New York every critic took a crack at Bill's grammar.

Outraged guardians of the King's English are flooding the managerial offices of the Chanin Theaters Corporation with rebukes because of McGuire's sacrilege. "I'll leave the entire matter up to the box office," says Bill. "To the pure all things are pure."

Which seems to indicate that Bill may have heard of the experience of Ray Gilhooley and Nell Whalen, racing drivers, who put the word, "Entenrence," over the door of the garage they operated in New York before it became a night club.

A dozen persons a day used to stop in the garage office to remind Messrs. Gilhooley and Whalen of their orthography was atrocious and should be suppressed. One word led to another with the result that Gilhooley and Whalen got in so many words they would wind up by selling the grammar expert a second-hand auto.

Odd McIntyre reports the Broadway wag who suggested that "Able's Irish Rose," now famed and kidded because of its long run on Broadway, should suspend for a week while members of the cast have their faces lifted. The cast is practically the same as that which started Anne Nichols' much-maligned play on its road to success so long ago that those who remember the date refuse to admit it. Miss Nichols, who peddled the piece up and down Broadway without a nibble, eventually producing it herself with the aid of an angel, has made millions from the thing and is still raking in the shekels.

And while in a facetious mood it may be appropriate to wind up the column with the story George Rector, scion of the famous Rector restaurant family, told on Nat Wills, the comedian. Wills, says Rector, married a famous circus equestrienne, one of a noted family. Although a large woman she was surprisingly graceful on her horse's back, daintily leaping through hoops and doing other sawdust tricks for the multitude.

While filling a stage engagement one time however, Nat and his husky wife engaged in a quarrel which ended in Nat being thrown bodily from their dressing room. It was claimed afterward, but never verified, that he was thrown through the door. A friend, passing at the moment, rushed to Wills' assistance. Nat raised himself on one elbow, rubbed a bump on his head and remarked: "I should have married the horse."

Today's Talk

UNDER THE SILENT TREES

Every man and woman should, sometime during the year, visit the country and so forget everything else that they may commune anew with the silent forces of the wild.

Every year my friend, Chief Beckman, who conducts a camp on the shores of Lake Champlain, welcomes me for a little visit. He gives me his choicest tent right on the edge of the lake under thick, great pines.

I retire early. The ends of the tent are rolled up so that I lie with only a shelter above my head. The waters of the lake ramp and play under the stars, and when there is a moon, each tiny wavelet tosses a smile to me as I feast upon the breath of the cool night.

The other evening I went to my tent earlier than usual, for I was lonely. There it was that those beautiful lines by Amelia Welby came to me, and I give them to you:

"The twilight hours like birds flew by So gently and so free, Ten thousand stars were in the sky. Ten thousand in the sea."

"For every wave with dimple cheek That leaped upon the air, Had caught a star in its embrace And held it, trembling there."

Under the silent trees, when all is night about you, all the pride and conceit of a man seem dead. Just the simple God in his heart remains.

I thought of those I loved most as I awaited sleep in my tent. I wished that I might just then have at least one moment in which to tell each of my love and appreciation. I thought of my mother who left me so very long ago, but who seemed so near that she might have gone away just yesterday. I meditated upon all my past failures and my little successes. I thought how futile mere money winning was and how fleeting the applause of the crowd. Only one thing in life seemed worthwhile and that was the bringing of happiness to others.

I think that the great open spaces and the thick woods and the mirrors of water that dot the land, really make us feel our smallness and spur us on to better and higher aims.

Above one of my bookcases is a beautiful etching by Legros—an old man with hat in hand meditating under a great tree. I couldn't live happily for long unless a tree was handy where I might go for many a silent hour.

MITZI TAKES A NEW INTEREST IN THINGS

Jay V. Jav

Polly, Mitzi and the Goofy are arguing. They have been arguing for some time. Dad dismisses the whole performance by saying they are getting on one another's nerves. Well, maybe! Mitzi looks fairly handsome in a black grosgrain ribbon hat with a cocarde of pleated ribbon on the side.

Now Dad has a remedy for almost everything on this trip. As usual he brings the argument to an end and provides entertainment. Have they met his young friends from Milwaukee? They haven't. Mitzi is registering interest under that large brimmed hat with the ribbon over her ear.

The young man from Milwaukee is also registering—well, intense interest, earnest admiration, or more. It looks serious to the Goofy. Well, he rather likes the young lady with the turban hat with the fringe around the top. Dad was right in providing new sights of one kind or another.

Mitzi is no longer bored. No, indeed, she has so many questions to ask the Milwaukee Young Man. You know, she wants to know about the climate, and the Lake, and the Parks. She is going to be well informed, too. Polly is going to get a few questions in herself. Polly's hat is upturned with a bow joining crushed crown and brim. Tomorrow—Dress for Street Wear

Squad Shows Well Against Beaver In Practice Tilt

Football outlook at Central High School this season brightened considerably when the varsity first string eleven and subs snapped through a long practice scrimmage game with Beaver Creek High School in fine fashion Tuesday afternoon, emerging with a 13 to 0 victory.

Under the careful guidance of Coach Kolb the squad is beginning to take on that delicate violet and fine polish indicating a workmanlike style of play and machine-like precision in the practical playing of the game.

Thus far in the maelstrom of heavy scrimmage with the scrubs, Cedarville College and Beaver, Kolb's favorite team has escaped the injury jinx although the squad appears to be putting as much energy into every play that characterized Central eleven of past years.

Welcome news to the Central camp, with the opening game of the season with the O. S. and S. O. Home set for Friday at 3:30 p. m., came Tuesday in the form of the return of Bill Clemans, first string center in 1925.

Clemans reported in uniform for the first time and in the best of condition. His return greatly boosts the local chances for a successful season. The veteran lineman will probably be converted into a backfield man this year however, because of a dearth of experienced players behind the line.

Central's 1926 eleven is still some what of a mystery other than that followers of the Blue and White point to a successful season. It remains to be seen what the new crop of football candidates will contribute to the strength of the team.

Coach Kolb and Captain Marshall are much concerned over what the showing of the team will be against the O. S. and S. O. Home Friday. The line is rather strong again this season and the backfield is light and fast. Captain Marshall is a fixture in the backfield and will probably play quarter. "Bull Dog" Smith is capable of filling the full-back job, with Morton, Clemans, Gibney and others battling for half back positions.

Central showed in the first half of the Beaver game that the team has developed a fair offensive but is strong on the defensive end. The team played the final half after running up thirteen points, in rather listless fashion and never more than once was the ball in Beaver territory during this stage of the contest.

Beaver presented a green but husky eleven, one that looks like the class of the country schools in the county that may be represented by football teams this fall.

Ouch! Beans Smack Reds Again

Cincinnati's hopes of annexing the National League pennant went glimmering as the Boston Braves defeated the pride of the Queen City for the third straight time 4 to 0, Tuesday.

Boston, the seventh place club that specializes in bumping over logical pennant contenders, simply caused the Reds to fade entirely out of the picture as vital flag contenders.

St. Louis, however, is also having its troubles in the East and missed a golden opportunity to practically clinch the flag by dropping a game to Brooklyn 4 to 3.

Thus the two-game leeway between the teams remained the same.

The Reds still have an outside chance to be in at the death but the team seems mired in the worst batting slump of the year and has been unable to take advantage of its unlimited opportunities to overcome the Cardinal lead.

Cincinnati now opens a three-game series with the lowly Philadelphia outfit while St. Louis continues to battle with the Brooklyn and New York teams.

By winning three out of their four remaining contests, St. Louis can win the pennant as the Reds, by winning their four remaining games, would still be one full game behind. Even if the Cards break even in the quartet of games the Reds must win every game to obtain a tie.

But Cincinnati is not quite giving up the ghost and Red fans are hoping the Only team, by some miracle, can create that tie in the last meeting with St. Louis, September 26. In such an event, a post-season series of three games would be necessary to decide the races.

DEMPESEY CAN LOSE ONLY ON FOUL SAYS LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION

BY JACK MCCAULIFFE
Undeclared Lightweight World's Champion, Written For The United Press

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. Sept. 22—Unless a foul is called and allowed by the referee, I can't see that Jack Dempsey has a chance to lose the heavyweight championship of the world here tomorrow night when he meets Gene Tunney.

Dempsey is not a foul fighter, but he knows every trick of the trade and he takes advantage of every opportunity which has made and kept him a champion.

Despite the wise money that is being placed on Tunney, I think that the duration of the fight is up to Tunney. If he will stand up and trade punches as he has said he would do, it will be a short affair and after looking at the Firpo fight, I am of the opinion that anything might happen in a free slugging match.

If I were the manager of Tunney I would tell him to go and sock with Dempsey. If Tunney has a knockout punch he would have his best chance trading punches and if he hasn't a knockout punch, he has no chance to beat Dempsey by boxing because Dempsey has to be beaten by punches and plenty of punches.

No manufactured fighter is ever going to take Dempsey's title. The fighter who beats him will have to be a real fighter because Dempsey in the Firpo fight showed that he ranks with the best of the old-timers when it comes to the instinct and natural disposition of a winner.

If Dempsey got away with fouls committed technically against Firpo it was not his fault. It was the fault of the referee and the seconds for Firpo.

The reason I am talking so much about fouls is that Tunney will have some smart men in his corner, topping with Billy Gibson and Jimmy Brounson and they have been in the game long enough to know you never make a mistake in claiming anything you can get away with.

I don't believe that Dempsey ever committed an intentional foul, but I saw him hit low several times in Atlantic City when he was sparring with Tommy Loughran and Martin Burke. He hit Loughran several times in the groin and once far back on the hip and the rules provide that the rabbit punch and the kidney blow can't be used.

In the old days we used to feint with the left hand to draw the guard of our opponents up or down and then cross with a right hand, but Dempsey does more than feint. He throws the punch right through and he puts himself in the danger of having his hand knocked down by a boxing stroke so that it hits under the belt.

Dempsey admits that he hit low punches against Gibbons in Shelby, but he insists that Gibbons knocked his punches down.

Dempsey is not one-half the fighter he was when he defeated Willard in Toledo. His legs are going back on him and he knows it. He is the fighter he was when he beat Firpo for the same reason.

CROSS COUNTRY CANDIDATES OUT

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 22—Although they do not return to school until September 28, Ohio State cross country candidates are beginning to take light workouts at home in anticipation of another hard Big Ten campaign.

Three veterans from last fall were lost by graduation, but Coach F. R. Castleman expects three other letter men and a number of promising replacements back as the nucleus for the 1926 squad. In the 1925 campaign the Buckeyes triumphed over Illinois and Michigan in their annual triangular tilt, and were runners-up in the Big Ten championship to Wisconsin.

You can teach an old dog new tricks!

I WAS already a veteran pipe-smoker when I ran across Prince Albert. It happened one day in the smoking-car. I reached for my tobacco and found I was "out." A good samaritan sitting across the aisle held out a friendly looking red tin.

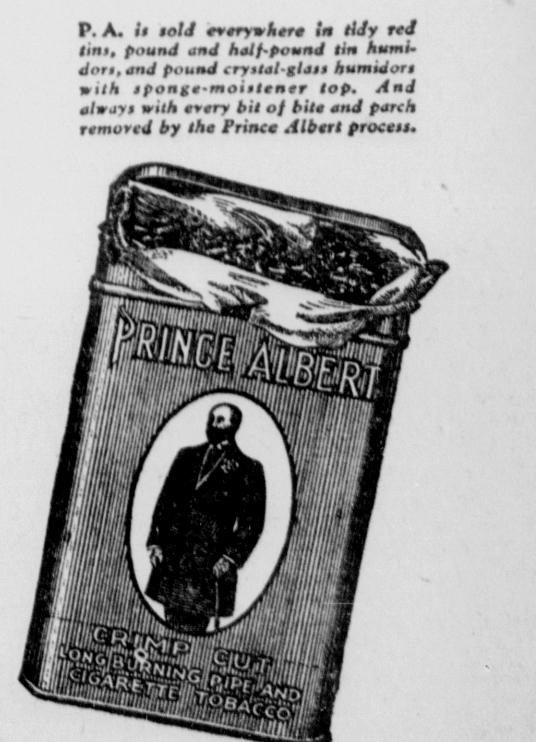

I accepted the offer. That was a great moment in my life, as it turned out. Why, that very first taste won me. It was cool, like a breeze through an open window. It was sweet as a ripe peach. It was fragrant, even in that smoke-filled car. I was having the time of my life.

The mildness of Prince Albert appealed to me too. Yet there was plenty of body to it. I knew I was smoking. And I knew I was enjoying it more than any other tobacco I had ever tried. That settled me. I bought some P. A. when the train pulled in.

That was several years ago. I've been a P. A. regular ever since. Maybe you need a similar experience to put you next to the grandest tobacco that ever lined a pipe-bowl. My suggestion is: don't wait! Get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today!

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

Hold! You need not stroke my beard nor ask
How goes the day, for I am here to have my whiskers sheared,
My face massaged, my eyebrows clipped, But, say!
'Tis a fault you barbers have of sticking in,
Of finding out one's biz. You need a licking,
But by the way, the one who trimmed me last got his.
What then? 'Tis such a tale as I cannot repeat,
Of whiskers, razors, and e'en the barber lying in the street.
Ah, yes, beware! thou knave. Take care my hair,
And now the shave.

Your voice is sweet—year! sweet as the song
Of the braying ass, Oh, insurance agent. 'Tis wrong to lead
You on, to give you hopes to pay my family when I pass.
To let you dream of premiums that you'll get, I'll not. Away
With you to yonder graveyard that is filled with flowers
That he got. He was an agent, too, insurance was his line
'Twas but
A day or two since he came to insure this frame of mine. Just take
My hand till I forget these thoughts—these memories that burn—
For one can ne'er forget—Ah, yes, I killed
Him with a churn.

Say no more, thou woman, for such thou art and will be
By God's plan. Oh, calm thy voice and have a heart, Rave on no more, but close thy can.
Thou gossip, why strive you another's virtue to destroy?
Thou are a woman, I'll not hurt you. But let's sit here
Upon this pile of stones. She was a woman, too.
But, now—well, she's a pile of bones.
She's quit her gossip for all times, 'twas the bloodiest of crimes.
But who is there to say that I should have let her
Live to gossip to this day? There's none.

Come, give me that cigar, for I must smoke to keep Me cool. A careless word might make me choke thee,
With politicians I'm such a fool.
Why I might harken to your plea and feel your warm breath Upon my brow. But, yet somehow I have a feeling that
'Tis wise to spare me, to let me vote my wish.
One does so easily these days. Poor fish!
His name was Joe and off he came and told how I Should cast my vote—we were on the river in a boat—
He struggled so—but I caused him to die.

If a fellow would give up all his bad habits on getting married, his bride would find she had married a perfect stranger.

doors away from the Fudge residence, escaped serious damage.
Some damage was caused in the St. John residence by leaking of the roof. The Fudge home was built by them after they went to Florida two years ago, and was remodeled this summer. Mr.
Fudge has been engaged in the carpenter business in Miami.

C. S. St. John, although his residence escaped serious damage, suffered considerable loss through damage to business houses owned by him.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ary and their two daughters, former Xenians, who have been living in Miami since June, escaped injury in the storm, a telegram received by relatives announced. Mr. Ary is manager of a large garage in Miami.

Mrs. H. H. Conklin, W. Second
St., had a letter from her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs.
Clarence Paukett at Little River,
Fla., assuring her of their safety.
Their home was moved five feet by the force of the wind, but leaked very little, although houses
all around them were wrecked.

Mr. Paukett saw a heavy piece of furniture blown across his yard from a neighboring house. He said that he had not been able to get out into the city at the time the letter was written, Sunday, but that everything seemed to be a tangled mass of wreckage, and that he did not see how the city could be rebuilt.

"Our automobile was not damaged," but there seems to be scarcely a car in Miami that did not have the top blown off," said Mr.
Paukett. The Pauketts feel particularly fortunate since they suffered little damage and had plenty of food in the house.

The Girl Who Dared

By May Christie

Chapter VII THE SHOCK

"Won four hundred and fifty dollars," gasped Mary Forrest, turning deathly white, and putting a groaning hand out to the ship's rail to steady herself. "Oh, no! Oh, no! It couldn't be! It would be too glorious!" Then, staring piteously first at Luella, then at Philip Andover, she panted out imploringly: "You wouldn't be so cruel as to make up such a story, just to tease me?" Her voice shook.

"It's quite true, said Philip with keen eyes on her face. "The result of the sweep was out some minutes ago, and is now posted in the smoking room. Yours was the winning number."

The girl took a quick step back covering her face with her two hands for a moment as though the dazzling vision were too much for her. Then darting forward, to his astonishment she seized Philip's hand in hers, and shook it, barely realizing what she did.

"It's wonderful! It's the best thing I could hear! I'll never, never forget you were the one who told me first!" she panted, her pale face flushed and radiant. "$450.00!" She wrung his hand again. "Oh, can I have the money now...at once? Will they really give it to me?"

Before he could reply, she was off, half-running, in the direction of the smoking-room.

"Now, did you ever?" exclaimed Luella, staring after the slim, hurrying figure. "Who'd have dreamt she had the money-craze as bad as that?"

Philip opened his lips as though to speak, then closed them. He was astonished and disappointed and puzzled all at the same time. The quiet little secretary was the last person in the world he would have connected with a gamble of this sort.

"I saw her in the smoking-room this morning with her admirer of last night, Mr. Rogers," continued Luella. "These Australians are always on for a bet of any kind. No doubt—with an indulgent smile—"he bought the sweep ticket for her. Then she added, as though it were an after-thought: "I hope uncle doesn't get to hear of it. He's rather fussy."

"Oh, come, Miss Luella," said Philip uneasily. "His supervision of Miss Forrest doesn't go as far as that surely."

Luella laughed in a forced way. "Uncle's funny. You see, he advanced Miss Forrest three or four weeks' salary, and of course it's expensive bringing her up the Atlantic, and all that. He took her on as his secretary just because she seemed so quiet and demure, but as aunt says, you never can tell with these Southern girls."

"You forget that my father was a Southerner," said Philip with some dignity, yet with a tiny twinkle in his eye.

"Oh, well, we're all Americans, aren't we?" compromised Luella.

"I always thought so, but apparently in law, I'm nothing of the sort. I was born near London, and though I came to the United States with my parents when I was an infant, and lived there, off and on, till I was twenty, I never took out papers—indeed it never occurred to me that it was necessary."

Luella looked amazed. They were strolling round the deck together, and she said:

"But your father had become an American citizen years and years ago?"

"Apparently he hadn't. He was—a little odd."

Luella had heard that the old man was hard and selfish, and had shown little affection for either of his sons. When they were mere boys their mother had died. The eldest boy had gone off to Australia, where he had never done much good and some years ago he had died out there.

Philip, at twenty, had gone to Paris to study Art. The World War had broken out just after that. At first he had driven ambulances with the American crowd in Paris, but shortly afterwards had trained in a flying school at Pau, and joined the Escadrille squadron of the French aviation.

"You were in the American forces, so you must be rated as American?" Luella persisted.

Philip shook his head.

"No, I fought with the French. A heap of Americans were with us."

"You're a sort of mongrel, then," Luella laughed, giving him a coquettish glance from under long lashes.

"Now comes this property in Cuba. What does that make you, pray?"

"Happy, I hope." He joined in her laugh.

"And in Cuba you will paint to your heart's content. But don't you think you'll be just a little—lonely?" Another look from under her long lashes.

"No, I'll love it. Apart from my painting, there will be a quite a lot to do in managing the place. It's big, you see. There's a farm—a hacienda, I believe they call it. And I mean to study up about tobacco. I shall have to."

"How I'd adore to go down there."

Luella's tones were thrilly. She moved a little nearer Philip as they walked.

He opened out to her. He told her of his plans and aims and hopes. His broken health, too. Cuba would cure it, surely.

Luella was all sympathy, all optimism.

"I've bored you long enough, I'm sure," he said finally.

"You could never bore me, Philip," she replied half below her breath.

He caught the words, flushing a little. Was Luella the Right Girl after all? She looked so lovely in the late afternoon light, in her soft tinted spots clothes, and her dazzling complexion.

That night Luella sat in a low-canvas chair on the topmost deck, with the kindly stars beaming down on herself and Philip Andover, and guessed quite rightly that her hour had struck.

For weeks she had done her best to make a deep impression on this undeniably quite charming man. She had succeeded. He was hers. She knew it.

That afternoon, when Mary Forrest had won the pool, Philip Andover had somehow seemed to lose all interest in the secretary girl.

It wasn't because he actually disapproved of what she'd done, Luella knew that Philip was no prig. But the "grasping" right on Mary Forrest's face when the announcement of her winnings had been made to her—the adjective was Luella's—had no doubt "put him off" Luella thought.

She, herself, too, had been clever. She had contrived to hide her own worship of money and material things, and had "played up" to Philip in praiseworthy fashion.

She had completely eradicated the little carking impression in Philip's mind that she—Luella—was over-fond of this world's goods.

In talking to an artist, Art was everything. Having been on an off the stage for years, it was easy for Luella to adopt this role.

"Such a pretty frock!" Her companion, carried away by the vision of beauty and sweetness and sympathy that was Luella, touched a fold of her gossamer gown. "But though it's simple, it's expensive. You'd never make a poor man's wife."

"You're quite wrong. I made this dress myself," fibbed Luella glibly. "And as for marrying a poor man, every real woman would, of course, and so would I, if I loved him. You can be quite sure of that. And now, speaking of money by the bushful, here comes my pet aversion!"

Philip looked up as John Rogers approached. The latter sought Luella for a stroll.

Sweetly she excused herself. Now or never was her chance with Philip.

"I'm tired. Do get Miss Forrest instead." When the Australian, crestfallen, had departed, she turned to Philip. Her fair face had an ineffable softness and a sort of radiance in the starlight.

"Though Mr. Rogers had twice the money he has—and I believe he's very, very rich—he'd never in the world appeal to me. The man I'd want to marry would be oh! so different, Philip. Someone with kindred tastes, and a love of all things beautiful. Someone who loved simple pleasures. I'm sick and tired of the empty social round. I'm weary of the glamour and glitter of this stage. I long for a new life, Philip, with a real companion. I know that, if the right man came along I could care—so awfully much." And the voice that Luella had purposely dropped from its usually rather strident tones to a low, sweet cadence trailed off into a significant silence.

Now the beauty of the night, the stars that spanned the blue heavens, and of Luella, had gone to Philip's head, so that a sort of dizziness swept over him. Romance... companionship... the sort of sympathy this girl was offering him... weren't they they only things that really mattered?

It's true that Luella's loveliness had intoxicated him more than once before. But a "something" he couldn't entirely fathom had held him back on each occasion from uttering the fateful words that would bring about a definite engagement.

"You really don't care about money, Luella?" His firm, slender hand closed over hers. It gave her quite a thrilly feeling. "A year ago in Aiken, you must have known how strongly—attracted—I was to you."

She opened her eyes wide in the starlight in well-feigned surprise. "And I, too, Philip. But if you cared for me, why—why didn't you tell me so?"

"I was afraid."

"Of a refusal?"

"No. Of—you."

That was an odd answer, thought Luella through her triumph. But of course the poor, dear, simple fellow had placed her on a pedestal. She was a little dashed when he said bluntly:

"I didn't think anybody as keen about money as you seemed—forgive my frankness—would make a man happy."

Luella contrived to keep the acid out of her voice as she replied: "You were quite mistaken about me."

"Abducted" Feminine Evangelist Faces Legal Action

Mrs. McPherson explains and responds to cheers.

Aimee Semple McPherson, the Los Angeles feminine evangelist whose disappearance early this summer created a national sensation, now faces prosecution for a "conspiracy to defeat justice," as a result of the conflicting and complex "explanations" of her disappearance. Her arrest, together with her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, K. G. Ormiston, former radio operator for Mrs. McPherson, J. D. Martin and Mrs. Wiseman-Siellaf, was ordered after sensational revelations had been made in connection with money paid for "evidence." Upper photo shows Mrs. McPherson relating her experiences to Los Angeles police authorities; below she is seen receiving the welcome of her great congregation after her "abduction."

my character. I never cared about money. Aunt was always urging me to marry one of my rich suitors, and it was she who probably put the notion into your head."

Philip moved nearer the enchantress, a light shining in his fine eyes.

"If I'd asked you then, Luella, would there have been any hope for me?"

Her lovely head was raised to his.

"You mean—you're in love—with me?" Her voice was low and crooning.

He nodded. This strange, heady feeling—this urge to take the exquisite girl in his arms—it must be love!

"Would you have married me when I was poor, Luella? That time's all past and done with now, and if you'll have me as I am, with the future all provided for, I'll be content. But you do mean that you care for simple pleasures, don't you?"

dear? You're sincere in what you say about money not really mattering—"?" he broke off anxiously.

Aloud she answered, ever so gently, with her eyes upturned to the man beside her:

"I care for you, Philip, and not one jot for your money, if that's what you're driving at! If you'd asked me a year ago, I'd have said 'Yes' right away. I've always been fond of you, ever since we met. And if you lost every cent of your inheritance now, I'd only be sorry for your sake dear, and not for mine—because the fact that you've come into this property hasn't counted with me in the least."

"You darling!" Her proximity set his veins on fire. His hands trembled as they slipped about her slender form. "Luella! Lovely one! It was just that thought—that idiotic thought—that held me back. I've always wanted you, desired you. When—when will you marry me, Luella? I want you so!"

Conscious of the spell that she had woven over him, a look of triumph flashed into her eyes, but Philip, his powers of discernment,

weakened by her physical magic, did not see that gleam.

"Any time, Philip darling!" Her lips were almost touching his. He could feel her perfumed breath, a sheer intoxication. "We could get the Captain to marry us—"

A sudden, discreet cough made the lovers turn around to see a cabin-boy beside them, holding something in his hand.

"Beg pardon, sir—it's a radio-gram—for you, sir!" He handed Philip an envelope, coughed again apologetically, and stood waiting for an answer.

"I'd better glance at it right away," Philip rose and went over to a lantern hanging some yards distant. He drew out the paper from its envelope...scanned it once...

...and twice....and then a third time....

With a sudden premonition that all wasn't well, Luella rose to join her lover. In the lantern rays she saw his face was very white and startled looking.

"Phil, what is it? Tell me?" He did not answer, did not turn. His eyes were fixed on the disturbing message.

"Phil, I have the right to know!" He swung round at that, staring at her. Then with a queer, short laugh he hurled his bomb.

"You've just said you'd love me even if I were poor, Luella. You've just told me that if I lost every cent of my inheritance it would make no difference to your feeling for me! But, my God! you didn't know how soon—you'd no idea how quick fate would take you up on that—"

"What's happened?" She reached out a shaking hand to get the radio message. "Oh, what does it say?"

"I'm not the heir to my father's property at all," said Philip grimly. "My brother in Australia left a son, it seems, and he inherits everything. I'm just as poor—no poorer! than I was before!"

WHY BOTHER WITH HOME CANNING!

Each year hundreds of women abandon the laborious and expensive process of home canning of fruits because they have learned that "E" BRAND fruits have a perfection of flavor, and a uniformity of quality not possible in home canning, and also that the ACTUAL COST IS LESS.

'E' BRAND

fruits are all personally selected by members of the Eavey Company and only the choicest from the finest orchards in the country is ever used. These fruits are canned in spotlessly clean, carefully inspected kitchens and because of the methods of canning have a richness and naturalness of flavor not found in the home canned fruits.

TRY THEM—SEE HOW GOOD THEY ARE

10c AND 15c SIZED CANS for the convenience of small families. An abundance for two servings. The same fine quality as the standard sized cans.
